

New Third Party Payment Feature in Development

Lumens Customers Participate in the Business Analysis Stage

MINNEAPOLIS – September 1, 2009 – Augusoft’s Product Manager Tim Scott started facilitating a series of Product Advisory Board (PAB) sessions for the new Lumens third-party payment feature in development. This board is composed of fifteen Lumens customers who preview screenshots and participate in online discussions with the development team. The features will be released with the Lumens v7.0 upgrade. The new third-party payment feature gives staff the ability to handle payments made by another entity on behalf of the learner. “It is easy to see how enthusiastic customer involvement contributes to the innovative design and business use of the features that expand Lumens functionality,” stated Samantha Stierna, Augusoft’s Marketing Communications Specialist who also participates in the PAB sessions.

Augusoft continues to provide best-practice innovative software that meets the industry’s evolving needs. Product Advisory Boards, market trends, industry experts and research gathered from LERN® are used to create Lumens best practices for future upgrades, products and services. Product Advisory Board members play an active role forming in-depth feature specifications, functionality and new business processes by reviewing prototype screens and participating in facilitated discussions. The company plans to release Lumens 7.0 that includes the third-party payment feature in 2010.
